-WHEELING, VA:-

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1865.

The Election Returns.

The Telegraph, thus las, is very chary in its supplies of election returns. We give in our telegraphic columns all that was received yesterday. In Jefferson county, the dispatch from Harper's Ferry says, the returns indicate the election of the whole American ticket. In Winchester, Flournoy received a small majority. In Clark and Frederick countles the Democratic ticket was elected.

Lynchburg gives Plournoy a majority of 479-a gain of over 300. Campbell county gives him 600, Fredericksburg 100, Alexandria 494, and Norfolk

In Petersburg, Wise's majority is 33-a loss of 200 since the last election for Governor. Culpepper county gives Ploutney 271 majority, and Fauquier 250. The dispatch says that 14 counties (which countles are not stated) gives Flournoy 4500, being a gain of 4120. Paulkner, dem', for Congress is reported to be defeated by Boteler. RICHMOND .-- We learn that a dispatch received yesterday from a gentleman in Richmond, states that Floormoy's majority in that city is over 800this a much less than was at first expected.

DAMAGES AWARDED .- The case of Dr. Charles H. Ufowne sgainst the New York and New Haven Railroad Company, to cover compensation for personal injuries sustained by the railroad accident at Norwalk in May of 1853, was commenced on Thursday last before the Supreme Court at Inswich, Massachusetts. The damige was laid at $20,000. Dr. Browne, it appears, was riding in the first car of the train to which the accident happened, in company with his wife. The two were resoured from the water into which they were plunged by some men in a boat; but Mr. Browne received from the concussion, besides other injuries, a wound upon his breast, breaking two of his tibs and forcing one of them into his left lung, cousing partial congestion of the lungs, from which he suffered much, and continued feeble for many months, and at last his heart Lecame affected in consequence of the injury. The jury toturned a verdict awarding damages to the amount of $16,000.

POLITICAL SPECULATION .- The departure of ex-President Fillmore for Europe, and the reported intention of ex-President Tyler to do so likewise, together with the presence there stready of ex-President Von Buren, have set the guid nuncs to speculating on the coincidence of so many distinguished visitors to the old world from the new at this particular juncture; and they have hit on the presumption-not a very violent one eitherthat the three ex Presidents have been deputed by our Government as commissioners to mediate a peace among the belligerents of Europe .- National

New ORLEANS .- Strong efforts are being made to cause a more proper observance of the Sabbath in that city. The Common Council have taken the matter in hand, and are watmly seconded by the press. The Creole says:

The resident citizens of New Orleans are more disgusted with the profauntion of the Sabbath by non-resident actors, shownen, concert-singers, and the whole tribe of traveling artists, who, on entering our city, convert the day of rest into a day of dissipation and gain. They bring discredit upon us by opening these temptations to the thou-sands of strangers, who, like themselves, have little regard for the Sabbath, except where law furbils their converting its hours to the purposes of their p ofession.

Appointments by the President, O. Eustis Hubbard, of Massachusetts, to be commercial agent at Cape Haytlen, in Hayti, vice John L. Wilson, resigned. Thomas Sprague, of California, to be commercial egent for the ports of Cape St. Lucas, La Paz, and San Jose, in Lower California.

To BOUNTY LAND APPLICANTS .- A divorce connot restore a woman to the rights or condition of widowhood. In other words, the Commissioner of Pensions has decided that the widow of a deceased soldier naving been divorced from her second husband, is not entitled to bounty land in right of the fret husband.

Statement of an Eye Witness.—At the meeting, at Paigoil Hall, last evening, Mr. Edward A. Vose —a member of the late House of Representatives —diade a speech, and, among other things, said that he was a member of the Committee of Roads and Hridges of that body.—that that committee had traveled largely over the State,—that on one occasion they were attended with superimenerates,—that the entire party numbered fifteen,—that he ordered some spirits,—that of the fifteen, thereon drank bountifully, and of the thirteen, thereon drank bountifully, and of the thirteen drank bountifully, and of the thirteen drank bountifully.

The committee behaved in the car a great deal like men who had drank large quantities of wine and brabdy. They smoked, swore and hallooed freely, and for an hour or so enjoyed themselves in attempts to outdo each other in relating disgusting anecdotes, worthy of a grog-shop or house of ill-tame. The name of Mrs. Patterson was featurable invoked by the jestisators, and in terms of ill-fame. The name of his. THE EX-POSTMASTER AGAIN ARRESTED .- W. G. Kendall, the ex-l'ostmaster, has again been arrest-Kendali, the ex-Postmaster, has again been arrested, and on a charge similar to the one on which he has just been committed for trial before the United States Circuit Court. This last charge is brought by Mr. Scott, special mail agent for Texas. There are other runners about the street, but, as there is insfortunately a disposition in human nature to condemn and multiply charges against the unfortunate, we put these down as due to this source and originaling from it. That is a black trail of character that would rejoic in the misfortunes of another We understand that the examination of the charge brought by Mr. Scott again to the ex-Postmaster will take place some time next week.—New Orleans Bulletin et 17th.

ATThe following very amusing story was writen, we believe, by a gentleman who is now a resident of this city, and has heretofore been published in some of the Virginia papers :

The Negro Insurrection :

During the years 1833'4 and 5, Assssss, Va., was the residence of a few choice spirits for fun and froile, and whenever a stranger inight happen to light among them having any peculiarity about the year 1834, a dapper little man dropped in among them from Lynchburg, who, smong other striking traits of character, was passionately fond of beating tre thas Drum. For the sake of convenience, we will call him John. Well, John was one of those pompous little men, about as wide as long, and as near as may be the shape (f an old-fashioned Dutch-oven, with a pair of legs about as long and approaching in curvature a pair of legs, terminated to be about $5,50, but their market is not verticing a pumph in our trainer to be about $5,50, but their market is not verticing a pumph in with two laster exacts since the verticing a pumph in with two laster exacts since the verticing a pumph in with two laster exacts since the verticing a pumph in the laster exacts since the verticing a pumph in with two laster exacts since the verticing a pumph in the verticing and the verticing a pumph in the verticing a pumph in the verticing and the long and approaching in curvature a pair of hames, a huge head with an enormous pair of ears, to sembling a pumpkin with two batter cakes pinned to it, with a rest ees pair of eyes resembling anti-quated pewter builtet buttons, closely compressed lips, and a stingy looking nose, that presented the appearance of having been hastily pinched up and a Letin inscription of the large ones has been ascertained to be about $5,50, but their market price is not yet fixed. A large gold one which we saw, bore upon the obverse a well excouted profile in the centre, surrounded by the inscription "IACOBYS D: C. MAG: BRI. ETHI. IREX's and a Letin inscription on the reverse. A tradition has been handed down to the effect that the island was occupied by a garrison, which the island was occupied by a garrison, which the island of superstitious east or convenient excitability. calamity was ever uppermost. Scarcely a day passed that he did not either think or gabble of "Nat Turner's Resurrection," as he classically termed it, with excited eye and cadaverous countenance. This was enough for the lovers of fun. A scheme was at once conceded to give John a sweat, as well as a foteknowledge of his powers of comotion, should occasion ever tender it necessary for him to conclude that "discretion was the better part of valor," for, he it remembered, that whilst he had a most coursegous heart, no little man was ever doomed to wear a more cowardly pair of legs. Terrible for chodings were at once whispered into his ears of "a r.se among the negroes," the mere contemplation of which bought the bristly hair upon his head to a perpendicular, and made him as wild and timid after the sun had gone to bed as a startled fawn, after which hour, nothing, save his fondness for beating the calamity was ever uppermost. Scarcely a day passed that he did not either think or gabble of "Nat Turner's Resurrection," as he classically nade to come off in the vicinity of town on some data and gloomy night, in which it was to fall to John's lot to perform the important part of beating the flass Drum. They knew that this would take, and made their arrangements accordingly. The proper night at length arrived, John was formally invited, and the company, comprising half a dozen acting as counsel, and the words spoken being pertinent to the issue pending. The Court, Judge Latrabeo presiding, after "discontising sweet sounds" to the sleeping links be little to the town. All the preliminaries being settled, the company wended their way up the hill, John with his big drum swinging before him by a strap of webbing passing over his shoulders, which was sewed tight and fast to his coat collar by a companion who pretended to show unusual foundaces for John, by familiarly reating his hand upon his back as they slowly walked along.

Attength they readed the summit, where unbroken silence had reigned for hours, except the silence had reigned for hours, except the

The place and the hour were just such as to awaken a we place and the hour were just such as hears, and place and the hour were just such as to awaken a we in a superstituous mind, and at such a place, and such a lime the music commenced. There sloud John behind his big copper frament, with nothing visible of the outer man save his head above his eyebrows and his diampy little feet, namnering away with all the dignified solemnity of an automation organization. "In the course of his automation organization," in the course of his man events," the signal time broke upon the ears of the men in the ravine, when bang! bang! bang! tesounded lite-arms, and one of the musicians fell, exclaiming—"Run boys, sive your lives if you com—"I a deal man—the negroes have killed me?"

"Sawney then plied his new acquaintance with interrepations as to his tunne, age, nativity and former occupations, but elseiting no replies beyond a knowing shake of the head or a nearly winking of the eye, (the ape was probably neditating the best way of tweakin our friend's nose,) he concluded the ape was bound to keep non committal, and looking cautiously around, chuckted out, 'tle, heye too sharp for 'm, old feller. He cast a wild and hotried glance around fire in that place, and is personally tesponsible thus then threw forward his head and made a sud- for them: ed the Warlocks, John's companions of maspipear ted. He cast a wild and harrierie glance around him, then threw forward his head and made a studden and desperate jerk backwark to divest himself of the drus, but it was too tightly fastened to budge an inch, and the retrograde movement only had the effect of placing him in the still more frightful predicament of having the back of his coat drawn as tightly over his head as the parchment upon his drum, and exposing to the fire of the enemy that portion of his body where his heart was supposed to lay. He righted himself ma moment, squared the drum before him, cast a wild and hurried glance in the direction of the supposed in hursh, and struck out at the top of his speed in the drum at his knees came in contact with it, which ponderous instrument was ever and anon knowed up by the concussion till he could see under it, his voice was heard high above the surrounding din, exclaiming—"For Hetzen's sake cant for—this infernal drum!" On he went, drum and all, as if all the furies were at his heefs, till he came to an intervening lence. Mounting this, the drum still swinging before him, he made out to reach the topinust rail, where losing his balance, in his effort to pint the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a moment by the fell backward, and the drum being upon the optical side, he was suspended for a m

These rough-and-tumble revolutions of John and the drum continued to the foot of the hill near the church, where bouncing a log, they separated, the church, where bouncing a log, they separated, John teaving the drum alone in its glory, whits:

Yethan Fox would teapertuily inform the citient of the drum alone in the glory, whits:

| With the Confectionery information to the confectionery in the confectionery in the confectionery in the confectionery.

John teaving the drum and long teachers are confectionery. John feaving the dram 'alone in its glory,' whits: he relieved from the 'weight that beset him,' struck out with more than 'Gray Engle' speed, making a radius of more than 40 feet as he attempted to turn a corner, and dashed towards home like a to turn a corner, and dashed towards home like a tornato. Reaching the house, he had no line to enter by the common way, but sprang through a paneless window, and alighting in the middle of the foom with the sash hanging about his neck alter the manner of a pig-yoke of the olden time, he paused but a moment to treather, and botted headlong into the sleeping apartment of his 'Boss,' two, being alarmed by the tacket, sprang from his bed and demanded to know the cause of such an unceremonious intrusion. 'Res res-resurrection among the niggers!' gasped John, us he sank exhaused to the Boot.

The 'Buss,' somewhat apprehensive of such an event himself, having heard it so much talked of, hurried on his unmentionables with as little delay as possible, took down his gun, pressed John into parting down the supposed 'rice among the niggers,' or the 'resurrection,' so John had termed it. The immediate neighbors all being in the secret, they all atmed themselves and accompanied him sud John to the supposed scene of action. In the meantime the men in the ravine had left their hiding-place and divided into two squads—one concealing themselves behind busines and brambles, and the other under the old chutch, which stood upon prilate some 3 or 4 feet hig. Between these two companies the crowd had now wandered, where all approared to be peering into the surrounding darkness to discover the supposed armed glean of light dark. band of negroes. Just at that moment a fittul gleam of light flashed in John's face, and bong! gleam of light flashed in John's face, and bong! resonnded a gun within a few paces of him. This was enough. Away he went on his second heat, and being minus the drum, his speed was greatly increased. His face being in the opposite direction from home, and having no time to turn, ho took a straight shoot westward; turning a corner of a garden on his loft he took up an alley to the Main street, taking this, which had just been Mondainized, he went over it towards home with a speed and a racket never before or since approached by any animal with but two legs. It was said speed and a racket never before or since approached by any animal with but two legs. It was said that the gun-flints upon his toes attuck fite from the limitone, and that pieces of took as big as a man's fist were thrown up as high as the eaves of the surrounding houses. This time his race being longer, and he somewhat exhausted by his first heat, he bately reached home with breath it his body, the sweat streaming from every note, he entered through the same window, sprang into bed, hat, clothes, and all, covered himself up, neck and heels, and when discovered was findergoing a more than Thompsonian sweat, and incolerently, exclaiming—Mer/cr/ Resurrection. Well.

Prom that day to this, however much of melancholy may at times come over me-however much of gloom may shut out the sunshine of life, a hearty laugh will force itself upon me, whenever my mind reverts to 'The Negro Insurrection, or the Race with the Big Drum.'

About the period of which we are writing, the and John was one upon whose mind such a dire
